Anger swells over delayed twinning of deadly road

Highway 63. Residents have lived for years with 'scary' roadway

LUCY HAINES

edmonton@metronews.ca

Weekend fatalities along Highway 63, the stretch of road between Edmonton and Fort McMurray dubbed Alberta's deadliest highway, have reignited feelings of anger and frustration among those who use the dangerous road.

Seven people were killed on Friday after a head-on collision between two pickup trucks on the highway near Wandering River.

Former Fort McMurray resident Ashley (last name withheld) understands the emotions — she's felt them since childhood when her nine-year-old neighbour was killed on a drive to Edmonton to buy sports equipment.

She described the highway as "scary" — heavily wooded, with poor sightlines, rolling hills, constant two-way traffic and no room to manoeuvre.

"You can drive safe, but you can't control other drivers," she said.

"We're a key to Alberta's economy, but we feel ignored. We deserve the right to have proper transportation in and out of town."

Sobhi Hamed said the latest deaths were the final straw, calling the pain and sorrow felt among Fort McMurray residents who knew the victims unbearable.

Hamed, 19, created an online petition demanding the government twin the entire highway. In less than two days, some 10,000 signatures have been posted.

"We know twinning the highway won't be done overnight, but the work is far too slow," Hamed said. "People are fed up with the fear and needless death. I don't want to be their voice — I want to be the megaphone."

Hamed plans to submit the petition to the Alberta government.

Tropical tapestry unfolds at Edmonton International Airport

Flyers will soon enjoy the foliage at Edmonton International Airport.

Starting May 15, travellers arriving to the city from the U.S. will be greeted by a wall of green — a living wall of botanical art that is a unique component of the ongoing airport expansion and the EIA's commitment to sustainability.

Taking up about 1,400 square feet of wall space in the international-arrivals area, 8,000 individual plants from 32 plant species in various shades of green and bursts of colour have been designed to resemble cirrus clouds in the Prairie sky.

"It may be the largest living wall inside any airport in the world," said chief designer Mike Weinmaster, who with his company Green Over Grey has included tropical vine-type plants, flowing spider plants, peace lilies and those that will create 3-D effects as they grow and fill out.

The low-maintenance project purifies the air by adding oxygen and absorbing carbon dioxide and other indoor air pollutants, but it uses no soil and very little water. One short watering per day is recycled from rain water collected on site.

"We're really proud that over 97 per cent of this art project is recycled," said Paul Garbiar, vice-president of infrastructure and technology at EIA.

"And it's an attractive visual — a first glimpse of our city and airport as visitors come down the escalator."

Alberta Premier Alison Redford has already begun changing her lineup after announcing a new chief of staff Monday.

Farouk Adatia will replace Stephen Carter, who had served as Redford's Chief of Staff since she won PC Leadership in October 2011.

The statement from the premier's office gave no reason for the staffing change.

Homicide. Charges laid in weekend death

Police have now laid charges in connection with the death of a man in central Edmonton Sunday morning.

According to police, they responded to an altercation between two men around 5 a.m. Sunday, in the area of 95 Avenue and 87 Street.

EMS also arrived to the incident and a victim was treated on scene and taken to hospital, where he later died.

Brian Leonard Sawatsky, 26, has been charged with manslaughter, police said.

The investigation is ongoing, according to police.

Anyone with information is asked to call the Edmonton Police Service at 780-423-4567 or Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477.

EPS to suggest how to handle similar events to council committee in fall

HEATHER MCINTYRE

Despite having a good plan for the Elements Music Festival, Edmonton police still have concerns about raves.

During the two-day electronic-music festival at the Edmonton Expo Centre over the weekend, which organizers said drew 20,000 people, 27 were transported to hospital due to drugs and alcohol, three in critical condition.

Sgt. Nicole Chapdelaine said the numbers are a concern and, despite what some think, are not comparable elsewhere in the city or to other events.

"We don't have this issue on Whyte Avenue or Jasper Avenue," she said. "We do not have 27 transports to hospital for overdose, or drug- or alcohol-related incidents."

Extra presence

- Along with additional officers and drug-detecting dogs from EPS, Alberta Health Services assigned a doctor, mobile triage unit and extra EMS crews to the event.
- Staff at Edmonton's Centre to End All Sexual Exploitation said calls didn't spike, as they usually do during after-hours events and all-night raves.

Organizers are also concerned and will meet with Northlands and EPS regarding operations, said Boodang spokesperson Marcus Gurske, citing one example being alcohol service was slow Friday, perhaps causing some to pre-drink Saturday.

"We're all working for the same goal," he said. "We want to make things better."

Canadian citizenship uncertain for soon-to-be-released Black.

Immigration lawyers say Conrad Black faces yet another long legal battle if he hopes to return to Canada.

The disgraced former media baron, who renounced his Canadian citizenship to become a British lord, is due to be released Friday after serving three and a half years in prison.

Black has suggested he would like to reclaim his citizenship, but immigration lawyers say that would be no easy feat.

Dissident. Chen exposed forced abortions in China

U.S. and Chinese officials are ironing out a deal to secure American asylum for a blind Chinese legal activist who fled house arrest. An agreement will likely be final before Secretary of State Hillary Clinton arrives this week, a U.S. rights campaigner said Monday.

Bob Fu of the Texas-based rights group ChinaAid said that China and the U.S. want to reach agreement on the fate of Chen Guangcheng before the annual high-level talks with Clinton and other U.S. officials begin in Beijing on Thursday.

"The Chinese top leaders are deliberating a decision to be made very soon, maybe in the next 24 to 48 hours," Fu said, citing a source close to the U.S. and Chinese governments. Both sides are "eager to solve this issue," said Fu, whose advocacy group focuses on the rights of Christians in China and who maintains a network of contacts in the country.

"It really depends on China's willingness to facilitate Chen's exit," Fu said.

Billions given to banks: Think-tank

Federal funds. Ottawa maintains Canada's banks did not require a bailout during the 2008-09 economic crash

Canada's big banks received billions in support from the federal government and the Bank of Canada during the 2008-09 financial crisis, a report by the Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives says.

"While these funds were repaid in full, it is clear that the banks benefited enormously from public financing when private funds were unavailable," wrote David MacDonald, author of the report released Monday.

"In addition, had the rapid and enormous deployment of public funds not been available, most, if not all, Canadian banks would have encountered serious difficulty."

tank estimated the country's largest financial institutions borrowed nearly $75 billion in short-term collateralized loans from the Bank of Canada and the U.S. Federal Reserve, peaking at $41 billion and $33 billion respectively.

The banks also sold a total of some $69 billion worth of insured mortgage-backed securities to the government, the report estimated.

The Centre for Policy Alternatives based its report on information provided by Canadian public institutions and analysis of the banks' financial reports.

The report noted that much of its work was based on estimates because the federal government and the Bank of Canada have refused requests for a detailed accounting.

"A healthy financial system cannot be based on massive government support for which the details remain secret," the report said.

In exchange, Microsoft gets a long-desired foothold in the business of ebooks and college textbooks. The two companies are teaming up to create a subsidiary for Barnes & Noble's ebook and college textbook businesses, with Microsoft taking a 17.6 per cent stake. ## Spain. Leaders in talks over 'bad banks'

As their losses from mortgages grow, Spanish banks have begun discussions about creating a separate entity — a "bad bank" — to take on these assets and relieve pressure on the financial sector.

The goal of the new organization would be to reduce the financial strain on banks and prevent the need for either a more costly government bailout or an international rescue like in Greece, Portugal and Ireland.

Adding to concerns about Spain on Monday, the National Statistics Institute announced the country was officially back in recession as of the first quarter, when the economy shrank 0.3 per cent compared with the previous three months.

The Canadian economy unexpectedly shrank in February due to a slowdown in the mining and manufacturing sectors, dampening expectations that the Bank of Canada will raise interest rates soon.

together is an important rite of for all couples. And I'm not to the sitting-in-matching-chairs-while-you-sip-mojitos-all-inclusive-resort kind of "travelling"; I'm talking about real globe-trotting.

While traversing foreign continents can mean sharing some wonderfully romantic moments together, it can also (and somehow simultaneously) be a complete and utter nightmare. Seeing the world hand-in-hand is an eye-opening experience that can bring you closer together or tear you apart.

You really don't know if you're going to be good together forever until you've seen each other at your worst.

Dating in second gear

You'll quickly learn that there is such a thing as "too much time together." You will get on each other's nerves and there won't be any means of escape.

exposed and there's no hiding your true colours from one another. You will discover all of your sweetie's idiosyncrasies (over-packing, tardiness, disorganization, bad hygiene), and your patience will be tested to the very edge.

You'll quickly learn that there is such a thing as "too much time together." You will get on each other's nerves and there won't be any means of escape. A couple of years ago, I went on a three-week European vacation with my boyfriend. During that trip, I often found myself hiding out in the bathroom just so I could have some proper alone time.

The most important thing you should pack on any trip together — other than your passport — is a sense of humour. There will be times when you'll feel overwhelmingly hungry or sick, or tired. Things will go wrong — you'll miss a train, lose your Visa card, eat questionable seafood, break your camera — and you will have to keep going.

The most important thing for couples to remember is that you will fight; it is inevitable and unavoidable. Eventually, those "we'll laugh about this later" incidents will get to you and you'll reach your breaking point. You'll scream, cry and have a miserable sort of breakdown that makes you look like a complete crazy person.

Here's the thing: if you do all that and your partner STILL wants to sit next to you on the plane ride home, well, then you know it's meant to last.

This usually happens after 18 hours in transit or in a cockroach-infested hostel in Southeast Asia. So taking your relations on the road — whether by car, bus, train, plane or boat — can be an excellent compatibility test. Being together for an extended period of time requires a whole new level of intimacy. Bad habits are

Bee yourself

State of honeybees up in the air

A bee works on collecting nectar from a fruit tree in West Bath, Maine, Monday. A state bee expert says conditions are perfect for another honeybee die-off. A mild winter and unseasonably warm early spring have created conditions reminiscent of 2010, when an explosion in the mite populations killed off many colonies.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On Canadian soil

Population has depleted recently

The health of the bee population in Canada has been a concern in recent years due to the infestation of mites. In the last seven years or so, the over-winter loss rate of hives has fluctuated between 20 and 30 per cent. Before that, it was generally five to a maximum of 15 per cent. There is also a worry the mites will become resistant to the products used to treat them.

So far, so good

- This year in Canada is so far, so good. Although it's still early in the season, anecdotal reports from beekeepers and provincial apiarists across the country indicate this spring the survival rate for bees in Canada seems to be fairly good.
- It could be because beekeepers are addressing the mite problem better than they have in the past and it could be a function of the mild winter across much of the nation.

On the map

5th

Canada is the fifth-largest honey producer in the world, with about 7,000 beekeepers operating a total of 600,000 honeybee colonies, says Rod Scarlett, executive director of the Canadian Honey Council, based in Sherwood Park, Alta.

When the model and TV actress first heard that Skyfall auditions were to be held Paris, she became obsessed. "I sent my reel to anyone on Facebook related to the movie," Bérénice Marlohe recalls.

But after the casting director got in touch and she found herself testing scenes with Daniel Craig and Sam Mendes, the pressure hit home.

"There were moments when I felt scared and trapped by this huge concept of Bond girl", the 32-year-old admits. Marlohe's first passions were art and the piano, and as a self-confessed "paranoid" — starring in a $150 million blockbuster represented a departure from her comfort zone.

The 32-year-old was helped in her role as the mysterious Severine by studying Famke Janssen's dominatrix Xenia Onatopp in GoldenEye. "It's so original to have a character who kills and has an orgasm at the same time, that's what we go to movies for."

In the end, a sense of responsibility pacified Marlohe. Of Cambodian descent, she saw the global platform offered by the role as a chance to represent her country, still scarred by recent genocide and continued oppression "I see it as power to be a voice for my country, to speak for those who don't have that chance. I will use the celebrity for human rights."

Adrien Brody goes back to school

Detachment. Academy Award winning actor tries to inspire youth in his latest role as a public school teacher

Metro World News in Hollywood

Oscar-winner Adrien Brody has been particularly choosy when it comes to roles lately, popping up in very few movies in recent years — in fact, in 2011, he didn't do much besides his cameo as Salvador Dali in Midnight in Paris. That level of pickiness makes him a good match for the equally choosy writer-director Tony Kaye, whose Detachment — in which Brody stars — is only his third feature film, after American History X and Black Water Transit. The son of a teacher, Brody felt a special connection to the project, in which he plays an emotionally arrested long-term substitute teacher facing a gruelling assignment at a public high school.

What initially drew you to the project, to working with Tony?

Well, I look to find material that has some social relevance, that has something greater than being merely entertaining, and this film touches on such important matters that affect all of us and our future, and the importance educating young people and giving them a sense of guidance that I feel so many young people are missing. And I also know how valuable that is, just knowing my parents have provided the right influence on me. I surely would've turned out very differently without that. I also went to public school, and I know that it's filled with challenges for both the teachers and the administrators and the students. I think it's just a complex, relevant story, and I wanted to be a part of it.

It does seem an important story to tell, the perspective of the teachers.

The film also to me is a reminder that you can't have that expectation of your teachers to just make everything right, and that it has to begin in the home. The education and the guidance and the sense of a greater understanding of the world around us has to come from home.

Tony Kaye presents the film in a fairly arty, unconventional way. Did it feel that way shooting it?

Well, Tony has a spontaneity and an unconventional approach to a lot of things that I find very exciting to be a part of. We are making a film and there are certain rules and restrictions — you need adequate lighting and you need film and you need a scenario and you need actors to relate to one another, but Tony is very receptive to the energy. He knew where to be and when. He would heighten certain moments, and I find that really interesting — especially with regard to my character. I've seen the film several times and I played the role, but it's still so unpredictable to me. You don't really know if he's bad or if he's something incredibly good. And I love that. I think too often protagonists turn out to be predictable. And you know, Tony achieved that by really pushing the envelope and pushing me to go to extremes.

Did you have any teachers in your own life that had an impact on you?

Well sure. A lot of young kids don't have a tremendous amount of patience, and some teachers really have a knack for getting your attention and keeping it. But unfortunately many don't. I have a few that were real gems, and the greatest of them all would be my father. Even though he wasn't my teacher in a school, my father was the one who really instilled the most in me. I know that his students loved him. He has a profound patience and generous nature and thoughtfulness. At a very young age he really made me understand accountability and taught me a great deal about history and the world around me, so I'm grateful for that.

Were M.J. and Whitney an item?

Michael Jackson's former bodyguard claims the late King of Pop had an affair with Whitney Houston in 1991 — and even wanted to marry the late singer.

"Whitney practically moved into Michael's ranch and they had a fling like any other young couple," Matt Fiddes tells the Sun. "Michael said later he had always hoped the relationship had gone further, and I know he dreamed of marrying her." Fiddes says the pair had one more run-in at a 2001 tribute concert for Jackson. "They were both a mess, to be honest," Fiddes says of the reunion. "They shared what would be their final hugs and Michael begged Whitney to get off the drugs that were destroying her life." For those keeping track at home, Fiddes is the same former bodyguard claiming to be the biological father of Jackson's youngest child, Blanket, insisting that Jackson used Fiddes' sperm to conceive the boy.

Keeping up with E! reality TV

Could it be that a Kardashian is actually putting her family's happiness over her reality TV ambitions? The answer is: maybe! But don't tell her publicist that!

According to a source at Us Weekly, "Khloe has pulled the plug," on her E! spin-off series Khloe and Lamar. The reason, according to TMZ.com, is that Lamar Odom wants to focus on reviving his faltering NBA career.

Back from Dallas, where Odom was released from the Mavericks last month, the couple "have decided he should train all off-season," the insider tells Us Weekly.

"And she's exhausted from filming!"

However, Kardashian's publicist tells Entertainment Weekly: "The show has not been cancelled. It will depend on their schedules as Lamar's basketball schedule is a priority."

If the series doesn't return for a third season, at least there's another reality TV show about the trials and tribulations of young married life hitting the network.

Married to Jonas, starring Kevin Jonas and his wife, Danielle, will follow the couple as they navigate their daily lives at their New Jersey home while juggling his recording and touring schedule and various sets of in-laws.

Here's an idea, E!: Have Khloe and Lamar move next door to the Jonases, get Lamar on the (now Brooklyn) Nets with Kim Kardashian ex Kris Humphries, and create the most beautiful reality TV mash-up in the world. You can thank (and pay) me later.

It's time to talk.

Experts are trying to get people discussing the issue of not being able to have children

ROMINA MCGUINNESS
Metro World News

A house. A car. A career. A spouse and 2.5 kids. Should you choose to live conventionally, you probably spend your days in pursuit of all of the above. Most are within your control. If you want a car, you save and buy one. If you want a spouse, you have a drink, and then meet friends of friends. But the 2.5 kids — what happens if your body can't produce a child?

Infertility is something you don't hear a lot about, among people in their 20s, but experts are aiming to get more people accepting of the issue.

Barbara Collura, Executive Director of RESOLVE: The U.S. National Infertility Association, says there's a stigma and shame attached to infertility that's prevented it from being discussed properly.

"Anyone in the AIDS world will tell you how 25 years ago people thought it was contagious — now, everyone speaks about it," she says. "But with infertility, we haven't gotten to the point where people are ready to open up." Until society normalizes infertility, don't expect to see people running marathons shouting "woo hoo! I'm infertile!"

So why is infertility such a sensitive subject? One reason is because it revolves around sex.

"The moment someone finds out they can't reproduce, they feel let down by their body. The way they see it is that it's not performing the way it 'should' be," explains Collura, who also believes that getting people talking about their reproductive system the way they do about sex is the only way to increase public awareness.

Giuliana Rancic, the 37-year-old E! News presenter and reality star, is one of the rare celebrities to have opened up about her battle with infertility. Rancic and husband Bill's journey into parenthood and attempt at IVF (in vitro fertilization) was aired on their reality TV show Giuliana and Bill and watched by millions of people worldwide.

The show took a dramatic twist when Rancic was diagnosed with breast cancer, further jeopardizing her chances of becoming a mother.

"For some of the women in their twenties and thirties watching Rancic's show, it was the first they had ever heard about infertility—and the only place they had heard about it," says Collura. "This is not where we want people to be getting this sort of information, but at least they're getting something."

So where else should those afflicted go for information? Facebook, Twitter, blogs like The Infertility Voice, whose founder wrote the column on this page. Social media often allows you to be anonymous.

"You could be in the place where you are willing to share your story but not your name," says Collura.

Either way, it's the conversation that's important.

The truth about sponges

BEST HEALTH MINUTE
Bonnie Munday
Editor-in-chief
Best Health Magazine

In each issue of Best Health magazine we look into whether product claims are valid, from beauty products to household cleaners. In the May issue, with spring cleaning in mind, we took a look at sponges. Some are labelled antimicrobial or antibacterial. Does that mean they kill germs? We asked Dr. Donald Low, chief microbiologist at Mount Sinai Hospital in Toronto and spokesperson for the Healthy and Hygiene Council of Canada. "We don't know how effective the antimicrobials in these sponges may be," says Low. "Some bacteria are resistant even to the most powerful drugs. The sponge may not stop the growth of illness-causing bacteria like salmonella. Indeed, when you read these products' labels, they don't claim to do that. They do claim to sop the growth of odour-causing bacteria."

Any damp sponge is the perfect environment for bacteria to multiply. In just 20 minutes, bacteria such as salmonella can multiply to an amount that can make you sick. The best way to kill bacteria in sponges is to clean and dry them between uses. TO CLAIM YOUR FREE ISSUE OF BEST HEALTH MAGAZINE, GO TO BESTHEALTHMAG.CA/

MedicAlert ID continues to help Canadians speak to first responders when they're too ill to talk

This spring, Fiona Stryjak-Smith is stuck indoors because of a severe allergy to tree pollen.

Her typical allergic reaction goes like this: it starts with itchy hives on her skin, then she gets flushing on her face and neck, then tingling on her tongue, followed by coughing. Finally, her airway in her throat closes, her blood pressure drops and she passes out. "I've had 94 anaphylactic reactions in the last four years," she tells Metro.

By the numbers

Here are some MedicAlert statistics:

- Numbers. More than 1.1 million Canadians are members of MedicAlert
- Allergies. Over 600,000 of these members have allergies
- Threats. More than 50,000 of these are severe, life-threatening allergies.
- Common. The most common life-threatening allergies are to penicillin, sulfa and peanuts

Winnipeg. Besides tree pollen she's also allergic to wasps, latex, dust, bees and some metals. She has a rare disease called mastocytosis, which sends her allergic reactions into hyperdrive.

She tells her story to Metro to help remind Canadians that if they have allergies, membership in MedicAlert can save their lives. Stryjak-Smith wears a bracelet that tells first responders her situation and links them to a 24/7 hotline where they can get her full medical profile. Paramedics need to know, for instance, that touching her with latex gloves could kill her.

"It has saved me a number of times," she says. "It tells first responders my situation.

Sometimes I'm passed out and cannot speak for myself."

Anyone with an allergy, anaphylaxis or asthma can benefit from MedicAlert membership, says Robert Ridge, president and CEO of the Canadian MedicAlert Foundation. The fee is $24 to join, plus $5 a month and the cost of a MedicAlert ID (bracelet, cuff, watch or necklace.) "Be safe people," agrees Stryjak-Smith.

Savouring the ordinary moments

Savouring the moment is easy. The difficult part is remembering to actually do it. Life can't be savoured "in passing."

You must fully engage in it. Allow yourself the chance to really savour each moment. The more you do this, the more you'll experience the joy of being fully, wonderfully alive. Start now. If you wait for a great moment to arrive before you begin — you've waited too long. In order to fully savour the spectacular events of life, you must enjoy the ordinary events first.

Noticing, focusing on, and savouring the ordinary moments will make life fuller, richer, and delicious.

Hello Charles the Butler! I'm really hoping you can help. My niece & her fiancé are trying to figure out how to create their wedding invitations, making the "no children" very clear. I was thinking that if the invitation is addressed to only "John and Jane" with the reply card also only having their names on it, that might suffice. They are worried that some in the family will still not get it. Do they write "adults only please" right on the invitation? We appreciate any advice that you can provide. Thank you, Sydney

Hello Sydney,

I just dealt with this question for my dear friend Julie who is getting married in July.

1. You are correct in that the envelope should only be addressed with the names of who is invited to the event.
2. The reply card should be left blank for people to write the names in themselves. Why? Because this will help as most people thinking of bringing their children would likely write their names too, so that they are included for dinner, and this method will allow you to catch this early.

3. Finally make sure all family members like parents, brothers, sisters, wedding party, etc., know you want an adult-only party and so they can bring this up in conversation with those who have children. They can say, "So have you organized your child care for the wedding yet?" or "I bet you're looking forward to a nice adult evening at John and Jane's wedding!"

I believe this is the best approach. Now what to do if someone shows up with children in tow despite all of the above?

As grumpy and disappointed as you have every right to be, remember that these are your guests — just be gracious and get through the event. Starting a fight or mentioning how this is "adults only" will inflame the situation and cause a scene, which is the last thing you want!

Good Luck to the couple.

Afraid of higher interest rates? See it as an opportunity to tackle your debt

Strategy. If you're dealing with debt, here's how to prepare yourself for the Bank of Canada's looming interest rate hikes

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

What every consumer has been waiting for — and either dreading or celebrating — has finally happened. Mark Carney, Governor of the Bank of Canada, has flung open the door on interest rate hikes.

A rate increase, on its own, would also strengthen the loonie. Just witness what happened last week when Carney simply ruminated on higher interest rates — the loonie promptly shot up a cent.

And that's not desirable for most Canadian businesses, especially manufacturers.

However, Carney is clearly thinking about some kind of intervention such as quantitative easing (a.k.a. printing money) to devalue the dollar, allowing him to boost rates and cool the ferocious record borrowing of Canadians.

Since we might face a raise in rates as early as the fall and almost certainly by the end of the year, everyone with debt should embark on a protective strategy.

Live the increase

Among the most vulnerable to the interest rate hikes are those with large personal or home equity lines of credit. Those rates will rise in tandem with the prime rate.

Use an online calculator and add half to three-quarters of a per cent to your LOC rate. Then pay the higher monthly amount.

If rates don't rise you're ahead. If they do you are prepared. And if you can't make the extra payment you need to re-visit your budget and find something to cut.

Boost e-savings

In a higher interest rate environment, the last thing you want to face is an unexpected expense and be forced to pay it with a credit card.

Emergency savings are

Are you prepared?

- Thirty-three per cent of Canadians have one to three months of living expenses saved for emergencies, according to a 2012 TD Canada Trust survey.

critical, especially for families. Even setting aside an extra $50 each month will help.

Delay spending

Whether it's a new smartphone, e-reader, car or wardrobe you hanker for, put off all unnecessary expenses — especially if you have non-mortgage debt hanging around.

It's easy to cloak our wants as needs, so delay spending on those non-essential items.

Consider your mortgage

Rising rates send many homeowners scurrying to switch from variable to fixed.

But there's no hurry. Rates have to jump by the difference between variable and fixed before you are actually paying more.

Switching mortgage lenders only makes financial sense when a borrower can save money. ISTOCK IMAGES

Give me a break on my mortgage break fee!

FUN AND FRUGAL
Leslie Scorgie
money@metronews.ca
@Lesliescorgie on Twitter

I recently sold my house and have decided to get a new mortgage through a mortgage broker rather than my bank.

So, I met with my bank last week to discuss the transaction and learned that the cost to break my existing mortgage is nearly $5,000!

Hogwash! For $5,000 I could take a three-week European vacation or contribute the annual maximum amount to my tax-free savings account.

Mortgage prepayment charges are the costs to "break" your existing fixed-rate mortgage contract.

They exist because the lender has to borrow the funds needed for the mortgage from the market. When a borrower "breaks" a mortgage, the lender is charged a "breakage cost," which is passed along to the borrower to offset the cost that the lender is charged.

Take emotion out of the equation and let math dictate the decision.

Prepayment charges are typically calculated based on the greater of three months interest penalty or interest for the remainder of the term on the amount prepaid calculated using the interest rate differential.

The interest rate differential is the difference in the interest payable on your existing mortgage versus that payable on a replacement mortgage, calculated on the time remaining in your existing mortgage term.

To determine whether it's worth switching lenders, I've followed these steps:

1) Take emotion out of the equation and let math dictate the decision.

2) Evaluate whether the new lender has a more attractive interest rate, term and flexible repayment schedule (such as accelerated payments, double-up payments or annual lump sum contributions up to 10 per cent).

3) Using a free online banking mortgage calculator (available at any major bank or mortgage website), calculate the break-even rate needed to make it worth switching.

4) Confirm with the existing lender, by phone or in person, the exact fee. Present this information to the new lender and begin negotiating for either the fee to be lowered or to have the new lender pick up part of the tab.

Switching mortgage lenders only makes financial sense when a borrower can save money.

In my case, I'll save thousands of dollars (over the lifetime of the new mortgage) by making the switch, but I still have more negotiating to do before I can pull the pin on my existing mortgage.

NHL. Washington captain evens series 1-1 with late heroics against Rangers

Alex Ovechkin silenced the Madison Square Garden crowd that has been taunting him for two games.

If he can fire up the fans back at home, too, the Washington Capitals could be in store for a deep playoff run.

Ovechkin scored a power-play goal with 7:27 remaining to snap a tie and give the Capitals a 3-2 victory over the New York Rangers that squared the Eastern Conference semifinal series 1-1 on Monday night.

Just under six minutes after

Ryan Callahan got the Rangers even with a power-play goal, Ovechkin put the Capitals ahead for good after they squandered a 2-0 lead.

Whether Ovechkin heard the derisive chants that greeted him every time there were eight minutes left — matching his uniform number — in each period or not, they certainly didn't knock him off his game.

Despite diminished minutes in the playoffs, Ovechkin is still every bit as dangerous during crunch time.

"Ovi is a team guy and he is cheering his guys on," Capitals coach Dale Hunter said. "He knows what these guys are going through at the end of the game. They've got to go out and slide and block shots. He appreciates that."

"The one thing is that he has been real fresh for the power play."

Mike Knuble and Jason Chimera scored first-period goals for the Capitals, who will host the series' next two games. Washington is trying to repeat its first-round feat when it lost the series opener but rallied to beat Boston in seven games.

"We probably weren't very fond of our home games against Boston. That's one thing that we want to improve on," goalie Braden Holtby said. "I'm very confident in our group here, and I'm confident that I will be there to back them up."

Brad Richards had a goal and assist, and defenceman Michael Del Zotto had two assists for the top-seeded Rangers, who got forward Brian Boyle back from a three-game injury absence but couldn't turn it into a commanding lead in the series.

Young banned after hate-crime arrest in New York

Delmon Young was suspended by Major League Baseball on Monday for seven days without pay following his arrest on a hate crime harassment charge last week in New York.

The commissioner's office said the suspension is retroactive to Friday, when Young was arrested after a late-night tussle at his hotel during which police say he yelled anti-Semitic epithets.

"Those associated with our game should meet the responsibilities and standards that stem from our game's stature as a social institution," Commissioner Bud Selig said in a statement. "An incident like this cannot and will not be tolerated. I understand that Mr. Young is regretful, and it is my expectation that he will learn from this unfortunate episode." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

From NFL disappointment to CFL hope

Bo Adebayo has a new lease on his football life.

When the six-foot-three, 265-pound defensive end began his senior season at Western Kentucky last fall, it was with the knowledge he might be playing football for the last time. Although eligible for the 2012 NFL draft, Adebayo figured if he didn't make it he'd have to hang up his cleats.

But after being bypassed in last week's NFL draft, Adebayo is now setting his sights the CFL, thanks to his roots.

The 24-year-old was born in Edmonton and spent eight years in Alberta before moving to the U.S. and growing up in Georgia. Adebayo's top goal was to reach the NFL and returning to Canada to play football wasn't on his radar.

But when he learned the CFL was an option, Adebayo successfully applied for non-import status in the 2012 draft, which will be held Thursday.

Riders in 'driver's seat' heading into draft

Saskatchewan Huskies guard Ben Heenan remains the consensus No. 1 pick and Saskatchewan Roughriders GM Brendan Taman said Monday he has spoken to other CFL GMs about the top selection.

- But Taman said he hasn't received an offer that matches his asking price of a 2012 first-round pick, a future selection and-or a Canadian player.

- "We're the ones in the driver's seat here so we'll control what we control and right now we control the No. 1 pick," Taman said.

"To be honest, I never really thought about (playing in CFL) because I was so focused on trying to make it to the NFL," Adebayo said via telephone from Bowling Green, Ky., on Monday. "My coaches used to talk to me about it in practice and that's when I started thinking I should look into that as maybe a backup plan, but now it's going to be the main plan."

Adebayo's mother was attending nursing school in Edmonton when he was born while his father worked as a university professor. He's the youngest of four boys but the only to be born in Canada.

And he can't wait to return. "I've been looking forward (to the CFL draft) for a very long time and having the opportunity to return to Canada and play football," he said. "It's just a great opportunity."

Horoscope

- Aries | March 21 - April 20.
You have something worth saying, something the world needs to hear, and it would be a crime to stay silent.

Someone close will be rather emotional today. Make it your task to calm them down and help them see the situation in a more logical light.
- Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. You

- don't have to change your views and opinions just because everyone else seems to believe something.
- Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22.
You will come up with an excellent idea today, the kind of idea that can make you a lot of money.
- Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. If there is something you need to say that probably won't be welcomed by family and friends you must say it immediately.
- Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. A friend or relative will offer you some advice today and if you are wise you will give what they say some serious thought.

- Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb 18.
You will have a brilliant idea over the next 24 hours, but is it the sort of idea the world is ready for?
- Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20.
So you got something wrong — so what? There may be plenty of room for improvement in your life but no way does that mean you are a failure. It means you've got space to grow to even greater heights.
